Women's voices in the Mediterranean and Africa are increasingly rising against mounting gender-based violence in the name of radical Islam. Academics and activists of both sexes are concerned about the fate of hard-won rights and seek solutions beyond the victimization of women. Through feminist discourses and activism, women and men are denouncing biases, asking for justice, reclaiming rights in public spaces of authority, and reconciling older and newer generations of feminists in the Mediterranean and Africa. Such creative resistance constitutes the focus of this 8th edition of the "Mediterranean Women" Forum. Four major themes are addressed:

- *The contextualisation of extremism and women's resistances
- *Radicalized ideologies in the Maghrib
- *Radicalized ideologies in Africa
- *Islam and feminism/Islamic feminisms – Strategies of resistance
